

A Lazy Girl
By Du Ying Yu, Jacy

Last night, a lazy girl, Amy, surfed the Net and played games with her friends till mid-night, so she slept very late. Although the alarm clock rang, she still did not want to wake up. She ate breakfast hastily. She put on her school uniform hurriedly too. When she arrived at the minibus stop, the minibus left and Amy missed the minibus! She had to use twenty minutes to walk to the bus station because there was only one minibus which would arrive in half an hour.

Suddenly it rained cats and dogs but Amy had only walked halfway. When she arrived at her school, she was all wet. Her classmates laughed at her because she was half an hour late and it made her feel embarrassed. Amy said, 'I am sorry about that and it is because I surfed the Net late last night.' Her teacher told her that she ought to be more punctual. Amy felt confused and asked, 'How can I be more punctual?' Her teacher told her, 'If you don not surf the Net till mid-night, you will wake up early and you will not be late.'

After this lesson, Amy never surfs the Net till mid-night and is never late.
