

Happy Cycling

By Lam Nga Ching

Last Sunday, I went cycling with my dad and James in Po Lam. I was very excited and happy. When we went cycling, we saw some beautiful views. James said, 'This view is so good. Let me use my mobile phone to take some photos because I was afraid he would fall. I was very worried and asked him not to take photos while cycling. But he didn't listen and continued to step on his bike to take photos of the view.

James focused on the phone. His bike became uncontrollably. James said, 'Help! My bike is out of control.' I said, 'Be careful! It's about to collide. Dad said to James, 'Don't' look at your mobile phone! Look at the road!' I felt very afraid of James.

James bumped into me and we all fell to the ground. Fortunately, we only had slight scratches. After this incident, I believe that we should not look at our phone while riding the bike as it can easily lead to accidents. I was started and hoped that such a thing wouldn't happen next time.
