A Lazy Girl
By Yip Tsz Yu, Chole

Long long ago, there was a lazy girl called Amy. She lived in a tall building. One day, Amy played the computer games late at night. She played the games, and went to bed late at night so that the next morning she felt tired and woke up late.

When she woke up, the time was eight in the morning. She cried,"Oh no! I am late."Then she went to the minibus stop, but the minibus left. She missed the minibus so she needed to go to school on foot.

When she arrived at school, she was late. The teacher was angry and said to her, "Amy, this mouth you have late for school four times!""I am sorry."said Amy, "I will not be late for school anymore." The teacher said,"Do not just tell me you are going to change. Do it! Actions speak louder than words." Amy thought, "It never rains but it pours. It is a bad day."

At last, Amy became a good girl, she went to bed and school early. She knew what "The early bird catches the worm" means. The teachers felt happy because she became a good student.
